

➤ Ready for the Piloting!

After successful International Training in Vienna

After one year, we are ready for the core activity of the project!

Together with teachers and trainers from all Europe, the project team has successfully completed the Transnational Training from 11th till 13th January in Vienna.

The event was hosted by the Austrian partner die Berater and had the aim to explore together the newly developed Toolkit and create strategies for the Piloting that already has started in all our partner countries. The main activity was focused on discussing the indicators developed in the Toolkit and how to use them for the Piloting. The meeting was organised in a hybrid way.

After the training, the transnational partner meeting on Friday, 14th January gave us the opportunity to discuss various issues of project management.

➤ ILDE Piloting

The Piloting will involve students/learners and their teachers/trainers from Austria, France, Greece, Italy and Sweden. Two groups, one in the local language and one in English in each country will study with our developed Learning Units based on a digi-zero concept - this means: no digital tools! The other two groups will use various digital tools while learning languages. In the end we will see who of them do better. We are curious to see the results of the Piloting throughout Europe!

➤ What's ILDE about?

- The project intends to determine the effectiveness of the use of digital technologies while learning languages.
- We have developed four thematic Learning Units - always in two versions: one non-digital competence based curriculum (without the use of digital tools) and one digital one.
- An interactive Toolkit will help teachers and trainers in the Piloting giving them practical advice on how to use the Learning Units and how to use strategies and various tools.
- The Piloting will show if the groups with a digital-based curriculum are learning faster with better results. The Piloting is the core activity of the project
